

Coloring

Pickle loves coloring. Preferably with paint, but Flora's his owner doesn't like that. Then he'll splatter everything with his paws. So he'll use pencils, but that's not so easy. Holding a pencil with your beak is difficult. He also has trouble coloring between the lines, but that doesn't bother Pickle. A green line here and a yellow line there. Oh, there needs to be a red line here. Yes, that's much better.

"Pickle! What are you doing?" Flora suddenly calls out. Pickle proudly puffs up his feathers. This is beautiful coloring work, right? Flora sighs and scratches his neck.

"How am I supposed to explain to my boss that my bird colored on his documents," Floor mumbles. Oops... so that's why everything was black. Pickle will pay more attention next time when he's going to color.